

People & Relationships are more important than skills & things

PART TWO

A LEADERSHIP WEBINAR led by Ainsley Rose

The feedback from the session offered in April was crystal clear. This topic resounded with the many participants to the point of requesting a continuation. Ainsley Rose has accepted to offer a “Part Two” in August.

Although the session builds on the previous webinar, it is also a valuable “stand alone” for anyone who was unable to participate in April. New registrations are encouraged.

MONDAY AUGUST 9, 2021 10:00 AM - 12:00 PM

Ainsley Rose will continue to examine some of the basic constructs of placing people at the center of the work we do daily. The evidence suggests that people tend to leave leaders rather than leave organizations.

In this session, he will explore some of the specific actions we must be mindful about in order to demonstrate our commitment to developing our people. When people are ignored, overlooked, kept from participating in shaping the decisions and directions of any school, people tend to withdraw their talents and expertise. This is untenable, given that the job of the leader is to discover, develop, and deploy the human talent we are blessed with in our schools and educational organizations.
